Board Reverses Stand On Hospital

Will Favor VA Project After Close of Nevius Tract Deal

When it is a known fact final payment has been made to the owners of the so-called Nevius tract by the Federal Government, Board Member Daniel A. Dugan succeeded Saturday in getting the board's agreement to request Virginia's Delegation in Congress to withdraw any objection to having the site used for a veterans' hospital.

County Manager A. T. Lundberg said he and Planning Engineer C. L. Kinnier met with Thomas Settle of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to discuss the status of the tract at Arlington Ridge Road and Lee Boulevard. The owners, he said, have been paid 75 per cent of the amount deposited by the Federal Government and have indicated they do not want the property returned to them and the final purchase price will be set at a future hearing.

The present condemnation action, Mr. Lundberg said, is being taken in the name of the U. S. Government, through the Veterans' Administration and on clearance of the transaction, will be the Veterans' Administration's for disposition. He said indications are that if Congressional objection is withdrawn, the hospital would still be built on the tract.

Mr. Dugan said it would be preferable to have the hospital than to add the land to the adjacent Arlington National Cemetery. He said since the owners do not want it back, a Federal hospital might pay something to the county in lieu of taxes and would at least bring many of its personnel here to live. Board Chairman Basil M. DeLashmott said the owners do not want the property returned to them unless they can have it, "with nothing attached" and this cannot be assured. The Government has repeatedly killed attempts to erect an apartment hotel on the site.

Board Member F. Freeland Chew said officials of Virginia, under the leadership of Commissioner of the Revenue Harry K. Green, have tried to get some reimbursement from the Federal Government on such acquired land but there is no indication Congress is yet ready to adopt such legislation.

Falls Church Council Gets Blueprint For Large Commercial Area

The Falls Church Planning Commission Monday night presented to the Town Council a long range plan for the development of the central business area of the town. The result of two year's work, this plan is the first constructive effort at effective area development to meet the commercial needs of the rapidly expanding community. It covers the section between the Lee Highway, West Broad and West Fairfax streets, and between Taylor Gardens development on the old Gundry tract. It calls for cutting a new street from Broad to Fairfax streets, with 44-foot pavement, 12-foot sidewalks on either side, 1,800 lineal feet of store frontage on this street, alleys to handle commercial loadings, parking areas for 384 cars, and a site for the much-needed municipal building.

Col. H. P. Person and Chairman Edward Knause, who presented the plan, stated that all property owners have been contacted and all save one are favorable. More than one-half the land is now undeveloped and its value as commercial property would be greatly enhanced. Col. Guy Church, who would contribute most of the right-of-way for the proposed new road, would also have the largest area in commercial development. Mr. Knause said the commission hoped he would cite for the site for the new town hall, Frank Hinkins, the objector, who would lose approximately 20,000 feet for street and sidewalk rights-of-way, would have more than 80,000 square feet left at a higher valuation.

The Council and Commission concurred in the feeling that condemnation proceedings would be undertaken if rights-of-way are not donated and that the court would undoubtedly hold that ample compensation was received through increased valuation of remaining land. As a first step toward adding this development to the master plan of the town, a public hearing was ordered to be held on October 27. Councilman J. H. McCarthy, Town Attorney LaRue Van Meter and Town Manager Roy Dunn were named to draft a prospectus to be given freeholders and voters.

Politics

bodies," is more nearly characteristic of a totalitarian state than a democracy.

COLIN C. MACPHERSON, School Board candidate, told the Westover Civic Association that "Better schools mean better business for Arlington. New residents will be attracted to Arlington if its public services, particularly schools, are satisfactory. If we do not improve the school system, prospective residents will seek home sites elsewhere."

"We must improve our schools to keep pace with the growth of Arlington and provide the public services that will attract and hold desirable residents in Arlington. This is the only way property values in Arlington can be maintained or increased."

O. GLENN STAHL, School Board nominee speaking before the Stonewall Jackson P.T.A. Monday, declared "The very fact that some of Arlington's teachers appear worried about the School Board election is one of the things wrong with the present school system. A teacher should not feel that his or her job depends upon who is on the School Board. Holding a teaching job should depend upon performance and nothing more."

He also said that any whispering campaign that the job security of Arlington teachers is contingent upon maintenance of the status quo "is nothing more than a vicious lie." He said he and his four running mates, chosen at the School Board Convention this Summer, believe the "present uncertainty" should be abolished immediately and replaced by a guarantee that employment in the Arlington school system is for as long as a teacher's services are satisfactory.

MRS. ELIZABETH CAMPBELL, seeking election to the School Board, told the Home P.T.A. she favors the organization of individual school advisory committees as provided by Virginia State law. The duty of these local committees, she said, is to advise the members of the School Board on matters affecting each school and to cooperate with the board in the care of school property and efficient school operations.

"This provision of the State school law goes to the very heart of the public control of the school system," Mrs. Campbell asserted, "but the present Arlington School Board has paid no attention to it. Arlington needs a school board which will take the public into its confidence and give the public a full voice in the affairs of their schools. . . . I think it would be a grave oversight to allow the operation of Arlington schools to continue to be the closed corporation it has been in the past."

T. OSCAR SMITH, candidate for the County Board, yesterday accused the incumbent Board and particularly the incumbent candidates, F. Freeland Chew and Harry W. Cuppett, of exhibiting "a special tenderness toward the public utilities." Mr. Smith berated the Board for not having sought a reduction in gas rates earlier this year after the Rosslyn Gas Co. changed over to natural fuel, since it "continues to profit by the reduction of over $200,000 in the wholesale cost of gas." Taking up the Board's action last Saturday, when it decided to seek legal determination of its power to initiate utility rate cases, Mr. Smith said "This is obviously another delaying tactic."

He likewise accused the Board of deferring action on representacal machine" is responsible for poor bus service in Arlington, and for "the exorbitant interest rates charged against holders of small loans."

Mr. Wilcher continued his attack against Charles R. Fenwick, Democratic nominee for the Senate, in which he has accused Mr. Fenwick of being allied with the Arnold Lines through the fact that Joseph L. Arnold worked in Mr. Fenwick's 1945 campaign for lieutenant governor. The Republican aspirant insists that the "bus issue" in Arlington is one of the current campaign issues.

He also accused Mr. Fenwick, as a member of the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council on "Small Loans, of seeking authorization of higher interest rates.
