Democrats Win All But 1 Office In Montgomery

Only Gude Survives
As County Sweep
Ends 8-Year Reign

By Charles L. Hoffman
Montgomery County Democrats swept into office yesterday capturing all local offices except one seat in the House of Delegates after eight long years.

Only local Republican to survive the Democratic victory was Gilbert Gude who nosed out Mrs. Genevieve Wells, Democrat, by 33 votes in unofficial returns.

The Democratic victory came, however, after voters crossed party lines to hand Republican Gov. McKeldin a 5,000-vote majority over Democrat Harry C. Byrd. The vote was 33,350 to 28,251.

Victory for Sybert.

The voters turned around and gave Dr. Byrd's running mate, C. Ferdinand Sybert a 29,690 to 27,790 vote victory over Republican Edward D. E. Rollins in the attorney general race.

The win was the first for the Democrats despite a heavy registration majority since the Republican-Charter victory in 1946 that brought the change from the old commissioner form of government to the present council-manager system.

Democratic leaders credited their victory primarily to harmony in the party. It was the first time in more than a decade that the party had not been split by dissension and factionalism.

The Democratic victory lacked the strength to upset Republican Representative Hyde of Bethesda, who carried the county, 32,148 to 29,157, over Edward J. Ryan of Frostburg.

Nearly 62,000 Voters.

Yesterday's voting brought out nearly 62,000 voters, a normal turnout for an off-year election despite the inclement weather.

Incomplete returns also indicated the county supported all amendments on the ballot, including two affecting salaries of the county manager and members of the county council.

The returns indicated the $12,000 maximum ceiling would be taken off the manager's salary and the per diem pay of councilmen increased from $20 to $30, with no $1,800-a-year maximum.

Edward S. Northrop, Democrat, unseated returning State Senator Anders E. Loftstrand, Jr., by a 30,438 to 29,186 vote.

Senator Loftstrand, however, ran well ahead of all incumbent Republican members of the House of Delegates except Mr. Gude.

The five winning Democratic candidates for the House of Delegates were Warren Browning, Blair Lee, III, Mrs. Margaret Schweinhaut, William B. Wheeler and Charles W. Woodward.

Mrs. Schweinhaut is the wife of District Court Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut.

Big Walker Majority.

Grover K. Walker, incumbent member of the County Council from the second district, piled up the heaviest majority in the race for seven council seats, beating Cecil E. Custer by 6,684 votes.

Mrs. Stella B. Werner, Democratic council incumbent, however, piled up the heaviest vote in the council races as she defeated Louis A. Gravelle 31,690 to 25,829 in the fourth district.

New members of the council include Democrats Jerry T. Williams, first district; Charles H. Jamison, third; Robert T. Snure, fifth; and J. Graham Walker and Wilbur N. Baughman, at large.

Alger V. Barbee, a former trial magistrate in the county, defeated Deputy States Attorney J. John R. Foley, Republican, for State's attorney.

Incumbents ousted by the Democratic march included Sheriff Charles S. Lawrenson, Register of Wills Walter C. Clarke and Orphans Court Judge Millard C. Taft.

Elected sheriff was Luke J. Bennett, Jr., Mrs. Elizabeth Asay will be the new register of wills.

The victorious Democratic Orphan's Court candidates were John R. Foley, Miss Ella R. Plummer and Lester Kraft.

Re-elected without contest were Circuit Court Judge Stedman Prescott, Circuit Court Clerk Clayton M. Watkins, and Surveyor Robert K. Maddox, all Democrats.

Gloom and Gayety at Party Headquarters Reflect Vote Trends, But as the New Day Dawns All One Can Be Sure of Is Ulcers

By Mary McGroarty and Jack Jones

If ulcers are born in tension, Washington physicians will have a lot of bipartisan business today.

Republican and Democratic Committee workers, who nursed the election returns through a hectic night at their respective national headquarters, had enough ups and downs to keep them on a milk and toast diet for a long time.

As the returns began shaping into something of an early picture, there was cautious glee in the Democratic National Committee headquarters at 1001 Connecticut avenue N.W., just as there was gloom in the headquarters of the Republican National Committee at 1625 I street N.W.

Then, as later returns came in, and the races seemed to tighten, particularly for the Senate, hope arose among the Republicans and a little fear moved in among the Democrats.

At the Statler, where Republicans posted returns for the public, things were quieter, and at the Willard, where Democrats ran their board, those activities folded early. But for the party workers, who followed each race as if the votes were being cast for them, it went on and on into the morning. This is a chronological account of what happened:

6 p.m.—Republican National Committee blackboard room a shambles. Television cameramen and engineers preparing for broadcasts. Wires overhead and underfoot. Tables cluttered with still cameras and photographers. Big board for recording votes neat and clean. Busy buzz of numbered directions.

6:30 p.m.—Democratic National Committee blackboard room, relatively quiet. All big wheels out to dinner. TV camera crews only occupants. Sit at various desks to get camera range. Two TV sets in room. Both showing westerns. Riderless horse featured. One small blackboard in corner. Reads: "Hart's Location, Democrats, six, Republicans four."

6:27 p.m.—Word spreads at Republican headquarters that President Eisenhower will make "unexpected visit." Room quiets down. Some necks craned toward front door. Others craned toward rear door.

6:32 p.m.—Republican public relations man deluged with questions about President. Replies, "He comes in that way, he stops there briefly, and he goes out this way."

6:38 p.m.—Applause from back of room. President Eisenhower appears, grinning and confident. As he strides toward center of room, he asks Mr. Hall how many Governors are going to be elected. Answer drowned in laughter. President pauses at huge board where votes are to be recorded. Asks one of volunteer workers if he is a stock board clerk. Goes through rear door and everybody relaxes. Pops back in through another door two minutes later. Chats with Nellie Phillips, 25 years with Republican organization. Asks her if they brought her in in a baby carriage. Leaves seven minutes after arrival.

7 p.m.—G. O. P. setup takes on deserted air. Notables who apparently eat later than Democrats, out for dinner. Most of workers busy in other rooms, making preparations. Group around television set, intently watching "Kukla, Fran and Ollie." Newsman quips, "What district is that?" Staff worker replies, pointing to Ollie, the dragon, "I think he's an incumbent Democrat."

7:15 p.m.—First returns entered on Republican's big board. Alben Barkley leading Republican Senator Cooper in Senate race, 26,332 to 25,532. Brief conference by reporters on how best to handle recording of votes.

7:30 p.m.—Clayton Fritchey, deputy Democratic chairman, comes back from dinner. Looks cheerful. Says it's too early to say. TV man with hand mike adds many yards more wire to coils underfoot, asks where Mr.

HOW DOES IT LISTEN?—President Eisenhower, perhaps a little pensive, listens to a photo election worker as he is dropped into the Republican headquarters at the Hotel Statler. National G. O. P. Chairman Leonard Hall is on the right.

Mitchell will make victory statement.

7:41 p.m.—Republican Chairman Hall waits for his first television appearance of evening. Asks workers to move plaster elephant to top of desk for more advantageous television view. Plaster elephant moved to top of desk.

8 p.m.—Fifty people, all very cheerful, now in Democratic room, watching Milton Berle on TV. Blackboard records reelection of J. Allen Frear, Democratic Senator. Representative Boggs, Democrat, of Louisiana arrives, looks cheerful. Says he can't tell yet. Senator Gore, Democrat, of Tennessee, chairman Democratic Speakers Bureau, arrives, smiles. Says it's too early.

8:05 p.m.—Returns show Senator Ives leading Averell Harriman in New York. Mild jubilation evidenced by Republicans.

8:42 p.m.—Sad-faced Republican in Oxford-gray suit mutters: "Burke's beating Bender in Ohio. Look at that!" Then adds optimistically, "Of course, that could all be Cleveland."

8:48 p.m.—Republican porter wheels in cart of sandwiches and coffee. Many watchers desert big board in favor of big feed.

9:00 p.m.—Election results go on Democratic TV. Man on TV says Univac will make predictions. Sixty people now in room quiet down a minute, but buzz again as man goes into technical details. Only few hear that Univac predicts "not a Democratic sweep but a Democratic landslide." Barkley goes on board as winner in Kentucky.

9:25 p.m.—Postmaster General Summerfield arrives at Republican headquarters smiling and full of confidence. Shakes hands around the room.

9:30 p.m.—Leslie Biffle, former Secretary of the Senate drops in. Sad-faced man, but looks cheerful. Says things are going "wonderfully well."

9:45 p.m.—Senator Ives concedes in New York. Democratic blackboard room set, now about 70, applauds, first time that night. Senator Long, Democrat, arrives smiling.

9:50 p.m.—Mr. Hall makes second appearance before cameras. "Right at the moment, all we can say is this—there is a tremendous vote out over the country. It is impossible at this time to tell what the situation is." Seems more harried.

10 p.m.—Democratic National Chairman Mitchell finally emerges from inner office. Says, smiling, "It isn't hard to smile."

This is a lot different than it was two years ago. The Harriman victory indicates the support we had hoped for." TV interviewer pushes for more election. Mitchell says, "I'm not being cautious. I'm just trying not to take in too much territory."

10:15 p.m.—Republican National Chairman Hall appears on TV. Says it's too early to make a statement. Crowd hoots. Mitchell goes back to office to make TV statement for another network.

10:30 p.m.—Reporters and Democratic spies drift back from Republican National Headquarters.

Rescue Squad Takes Man From Hospital to Polls

Everett Cooper, 42, of 3702 Tilden street, Brentwood, Md., voted yesterday even though he is confined to Prince Georges General Hospital where he is recuperating from a serious operation.

He was transported to his polling place in the Brentwood Fire House by the Brentwood Rescue Squad.

A fellow patient in the hospital, 81-year-old Charles Biggs, who said he had never missed voting since he was 21, also arranged ambulance transportation to his polling place in Oxon Hill, but decided at the last minute that he was too weak to make the trip.

Mr. Biggs lives at 7440 Brinkley road, Oxon Hill.

Voting Machines Awe 24 Foreign Officials

A delegation of 24 foreign officials visited a busy Prince Georges County polling place yesterday and came away amazed at the efficiency of adding machines.

The officials, brought here by the Foreign Operations Administration and the State Department from free world countries in Europe, South America, and the Near and Far East, saw voting machines in action for the first time. One man from India kept asking, "Where do they make their X marks?"

Prince Georges Democrats Win All Offices

McKeldin Trails
Byrd in County
As 54,000 Vote

By Charles A. McAleer
The Democrats scored a clean sweep by 3-to-2 margins in Prince Georges County—on Governor on down to county surveyor.

It was a stunning blow for county Republican who four years ago won their first major victory over the Democrats in a quarter-century.

State Senator-elect H. Winship Wheatley, Jr., said "The public felt they had confidence in the Democrat Party and its candidates to give them better government."

54,000 Vote.

The election drew more than 54,000 of the county's 86,531 registered voters for a record turnout in a non-presidential election year. In 1950, Gov. McKeldin won in the county over William Preston Lane, the Democratic incumbent at the time, 20,595 to 16,432.

Yesterday's unofficial totals found him trailing Dr. Byrd, 23,177 to 31,263 in the Democratic nominee's home county, although the Governor led most of the State.

The county, in backing Richard L. Lankford for the House seat now held by Republican Frank Small, Jr., reversed the situation of two years ago. Yesterday, it was 28,877 to 24,856 in favor of Mr. Lankford. In 1952, Mr. Small defeated Lankford, 33,612 to 30,043.

It was the same throughout the rest of the ticket, resulting in the unseating of 13 Republican incumbents in local offices. Among them was State Senator John Raymond Fletcher, who received 21,335 votes. His opponent, Mr. Wheatley, got 30,524.

Webb Scores Highest Vote.

The biggest individual vote-getter was W. Waverly Webb, Circuit Court clerk, who won yesterday over John B. Lauer, the county's present chief of building inspection. The vote was 33,005 to 17,481.

In the House of Delegates race all six Democratic candidates were elected. Lansdale G. Sasser, Jr., son of the former Representative from Maryland's 5th district, led the field with 32,105 votes. Just behind was Perry O. Wilkinson, the only Democratic incumbent to win election for a fourth straight four-year term. He got 31,374 votes.

Other winners and their votes were Ernest A. Lovelace, Jr., 30,985; Harvey G. Machen, 30,866; C. Philip Nichols, 29,429; and Carlton R. Sickles, 29,125. Trailing were Mrs. Margaret M. Conant, 20,273; John F. Lillard, Jr., 19,558; Albert R. Hassall, 18,976; Richard H. Love, 18,964; Ross G. Porter, 18,757; and Harry G. Taylor, Jr., 18,703. Mr. Lillard, Mr. Hassall and Mr. Taylor all were incumbents.

Judge Elected to Board.

In the county commissioner race, Lansdale G. Clagett, outgoing judge of the county Orphans' Court, topped the field with 31,455 votes. Also winning were Hyattsville's Mayor Jesse S. Galt, 30,841; Mount Rainier's Mayor Herbert W. Reichenbach, 30,335; Greenbelt's Mayor Frank J. Lastner, 30,004; and A. Preston Perrie, 29,112. Losers were Thomas E. Latimer, 21,227; Daniel A. Abbott, 19,994; Thomas F. Hicks, 19,928; Edward J. (Ned) Waters, 19,849; and W. Everett Marton, 19,449.

Incumbents except Mr. Hicks. He has been their chief clerk.

Blair H. Smith won the State's attorney post, defeating Carlyle J. Lancaster, G. O. P. incumbent, 30,040 to 20,569.

Charles E. Callow, ousted Julian B. McKay, the county's treasurer of the last four years, 29,406 to 21,095.
