Bond Issue Is Backed By Planners

By EILEEN REMINGTON
ARLINGTON — The Arlington County Planning Commission last night recommended that the County Board approve a $9 million bond issue but asked that board members not make a final list of priorities until planning commission members have an opportunity to study individual projects and submit recommendations.

The motion by Lutrelle Parker won support after a 40-minute discussion during which members agreed that they had not sufficient information on which to make their recommendations to the board.

DR. LINCOLN Todd said he was perturbed that more information had not been supplied commission members and said that the commission had been faced with the same situation in March of this year when the School board appeared before them.

"It concerns me that we can spend two evenings discussing the height of a sign in a shopping center, but have neither the time nor the information to act intelligently on this."

"The $9 million bond issue will increase our indebtedness by 15 percent," he said. Bonds are not as cheap as they used to be. We should have as much time to discuss this as we have to discuss the vacation of an alley or a zoning case."

Planning Director Richard Arms said that the proposed bond issue is far short of what the county needs in the line of capital improvements.

"CLOSE-ON capital commitments," he said, "can go past $50 million and still be considerably below normal expectations of estimated value. Many areas that concern us are not included in this tonight. The proposal is conservative."

Conservative or not, commission members said.

Pool Group Will Appeal Court Ruling

SPRINGFIELD — Directors of the Parliament Pool Association have decided to appeal a court ruling that an August teenage party at the Kings Park swimming facility violated Fairfax County's noise ordinance.

A Fairfax County Court judge ruled against the pool last week and fined it $300.

CHARLES MAJER, attorney for the Association, said yesterday that the appeal will be filed in Fairfax Circuit Court sometime before the legally stipulated Sept. 10, deadline.

The trial last week arose from the complaints of two Kings Park housewives who live near the swimming pool and who violently object to the "noise" created at teenage dances which have been held at the pool throughout the summer.

The women, Mrs. G. D. Worth of 8513 Parliament Drive, and Mrs. Carolyn Harrell of 8511 Parliament Drive, both insisted in court that the music from the dances kept them from "enjoying

Airline Asks Terminal Expansion

Planners Fear Snarls at Airport Will Result From Improvements

ARLINGTON — Members of the Arlington County Planning Commission last night with few exceptions, expressed a fear that the piecemeal renovation and improvement at National Airport will increase traffic there.

The topic was introduced when commissioners were presented plans for improvements by National Airlines of its facilities at the airport.

PLANNING Director Richard Arms told commission members that the National Airlines plans are the last of a series of plans by five major airlines, and that they were being brought to the attention of the commission because they were due to be discussed by members of the Federal Aviation Agency, before the National Capital Planning Commission later this month.

On Planning Commission Chairman Theron Rice's comment that "you're wasting our time," Arms explained that the item was put on the agenda during his absence from the county.

Dr. John E. Lohman asked that a letter to the NCPCC request that the body refer the matter to the Arlington County Planning Commission.

SCHOOLS OPEN — This scene, recorded at the Barrett Elementary School in Arlington, was repeated many times throughout Northern Virginia yesterday as schools opened in all jurisdictions. The schools opened with no major problems reported by officials. (SUN Photo by Little).

School Opening Smooth in N. Va.

School bells heralding the opening of the 1967-68 year yesterday posed no major problems for area school officials, according to reports.

This was not the case for some students, however.

"WE HAD the usual tears" from first-graders, one administrator observed. And a first grader was overheard confiding — "I think I'm scared, daddy."

From the adult point of view, a "really good opening" and "no problems whatever" were typical comments from principals of Arlington County, Fairfax County and Falls Church schools, although a few said they had slightly higher numbers of students than they had expected.

Arthur Mitchell, principal of the new Rolling Valley Elementary School in Fairfax County, said his facility had some 100 more students than the expected enrollment of slightly more than 400, but that no space problems developed because the school was built to accommodate 600 elementary pupils and 60 kindergarten students.

Mitchell said that Rolling Valley did use "emergency measures" to supply sandwiches to students who failed to get the earlier message that only milk will be offered at the school until cafeteria facilities are completed later in the fall.

ONLY 40 students failed to show up with "brown bag" lunches as recommended, Mitchell said, but they were fed.

All students in Fairfax County — and there are an estimated 107,000 of them, which is 7,000 more than last year — attended full-day sessions, officials said, except for those in pilot kindergarten classes which will begin next week.

Arlington County had "a remarkably smooth opening day," according to Assistant Supt. Howard R. Bovee.

Merrywood Townhouse Development Reviewed

FAIRFAX — A site plan of the proposed "Merrywood-on-the-Potomac" townhouse development was reviewed last night by the Fairfax County Planning Commission, but no recommendation was made on the project.

John F. Chilton, Associate Planning Engineer for Fairfax County, did tell the Commission, however, that he will recommend approval of the site plan presented last night.

LAST NIGHT'S review dealt with the first cluster of development on the 45-acre Merrywood tract, for an eight-building unit cluster located in a cut-de-sac.

The townhouses, which Chilton said he believes will be priced "in the neighborhood of $100,000," will be from 31 to 34 feet high, in accordance with a variance granted by the Board of Zoning Appeals to the ordinance which says that buildings in an RM-2H zone must be at least 60-feet high.

The cluster shown last night is one of 10 clusters planned in the ultimate development of the tract, which also calls for common ownership of all the property, with only title to the house itself being transferred solely to the owner. The cluster shown last night is one of 10 clusters planned in the ultimate development of the tract, which also calls for common ownership of all the property, with only title to the house itself being transferred solely to

Casto Blasts School Officials on 'False' Bus Stop Information

By CAROL GRIFFEE

ARLINGTON — Some school officials are telling inquiring parents that a bus stop has been discontinued because the Arlington school budget was cut, County Board Chairman Harold J. Casto charged last night.

"This is an out and out falsehood," an angry Casto told the Arlington Civic Federation at its traditional county board campaign kick-off meeting.

"WHY HAS such misinformation been given to the public?" Casto demanded, adding, "The reason can only be political."

Candidate-speakers at the session in addition to Casto were his Republican running mate, A. Leslie Phillips, and incumbent Joseph L. Fisher and Jay Ricks who are running as Independents with the backing of the non-partisan Arlingtonians for a Better County and the Democratic party.

The Republican board chairman told the civic federation delegates he has "personal knowledge" of citizens calling the school system to inquire about why a bus stop has been discontinued "and being told that it was because the budget was cut."

There are "as many school buses on the road this year, including 11 new ones, as last year . . . The transportation operating account was increased approximately $47,000, and $30,000 was appropriated for new equipment," Casto said.

LATER CASTO told a reporter he had talked with school officials who had agreed to stop employees from giving out the erroneous bus stop information, "but apparently they just can't refrain," he said, indicating he had received more calls about the situation yesterday.

The school budget was but one face of Arlington's government about which the four candidates traded verbal swipes last night.

Issues in the 1967 race are "more sharply etched" than they have been in many years, Fisher said, but declared that they all really boil down to one question: "Do we want to move forward to meet the needs of the present and the opportunities of the future, or shall we simply sit tight and hold back and allow Arlington to fall behind?"

FISHER SAID he and Ricks deplore the actions of what they called "the ultra-conservative, backward-looking group" on the county board.

Casto became board chairman in January when the Republicans gained their first majority in history on the five-member governing body as a result of the November election of GOP candidate Ned R. Thomas.

In less than a year's time, Fisher charged, the Republican majority "has allowed our teachers to fall to the bottom of the salary ladder in the whole metropolitan area and has eliminated entirely our Arlington neighborhood improvement program."

The board majority, the Independent continued, "has turned its back on needed regional programs for parks and other services by offering zero or minimal participation from Arlington."

ALL of this "damage and much more," Fisher said, "has been done in the name of economy that has produced a minuscule one and a half per cent reduction in personal property taxes ($1 or $2 for the typical apartment."

Democratic Board Candidates Reveal Lists of Their Assets

FAIRFAX — Saying that Fairfax County residents are "entitled to know" that no candidate owns property which would create a conflict of interest, the entire Democratic slate for the board of supervisors has released lists of their assets.

Democratic County Chairman candidate, Supervisor Frederick A. Babson, acting as spokesman for the local ticket said:

"THE DEMOCRATIC candidates for the county board believe that the people of Fairfax County are entitled to know that no candidate for the county board owns property which would create a conflict of interest if elected to the board."

In addition to Babson, those releasing listings of their assets were incumbent Lee District Supervisor Joseph Alexander, Mrs. Flora Crater of Providence district; Richard E. Dixon of Springfield district; Herbert E. Harris II, Mount Vernon district; Mrs. Martha V. Pennino, Centreville district; Harold O. Miller, Mason district; and George A. Simpson, Annandale district.

There is no Democratic board candidate in Dranesville district where incumbent Independent Harriet F. Bradley is seeking reelection challenged by Republican Hugh A. M. Shaffer.

Their lists did not include liabilities.

BABSON SHOWED stock holdings in the Western Union Telegraph Co. and the Greater Annandale Recreation Center, and his only real estate assets as his residence in Annandale.

Two autos, home and office furniture were listed as personal property assets while under "miscellaneous," he showed a checking account in a local bank.

Babson said his sources of income are his Fairfax law practice and his $7,500 salary as a county supervisor.

Alexander listed the Francoia Hardware Company and the Washington Lee Savings and Loan Association as his sole stock holdings. He, like Babson, listed his own home as his only real estate holdings.

Alexander has savings and checking accounts in local banks and lists two autos and home furniture as his personal property.

HIS SOURCES of income include the family business, Francoia Hardware, interest of savings account and his salary as a member of the Board of Supervisors.

Mrs. Crater owns no stock and lists her home in Falls Hill as her only real estate. Her miscellaneous assets include the usual savings and checking accounts in a local bank and Savings and Loan Association.

She lists her sources of income as her husband's earnings as an egg merchant plus her interest on her savings account and the interest on two second trust notes.

Wife Jailed for Slayings

Hargis Files Suit To Obtain Divorce

ARLINGTON — Former Kansas Congressman Denver D. Hargis whose 37-year-old wife, Charles, is serving a prison term in Maryland for the slaying of the couple's four children, has filed for divorce in Arlington County.

Hargis, a Democrat who served one term in the House of Representatives, had separated from his wife and was living in Vienna, Va. on Oct. 18, 1965, when the murders occurred.

A PRINCE Georges County (Md.) jury later convicted Mrs. Hargis of manslaughter in the case when the panel was faced with the alternatives of finding her guilty of first-degree murder or acquitting her after a panel of psychiatrists had determined she was legally sane under the "McNaughton Rule."

In the divorce suit filed yesterday, Hargis said that he and his wife had lived apart since July, 1965, and that there is "no hope or probability of a reconciliation."

The suit listed Hargis' present address as 4600 S. Four Mile Run Drive, Arlington.

On the night of the murders, Hargis told Prince Georges County police that Mrs. Hargis, who was living with the children in a Laurel, Md. area apartment, had visited him earlier in the day in Vienna and told him that she would never leave the children.

HOWEVER, he said, she called him early on the morning of Oct. 18 and said she was going to kill the four youngsters. She called back a few moments later, he said, and told him she had killed them.

When police broke into the apartment in response to Hargis' call, they found a .25 caliber automatic in the kitchen and four spent shells in the bedroom.

Brenda, 2; Michael, 8; and Sandra, 2, were dead in their beds, all shot through their heads.

Debra, 5, died enroute to a hospital.

At her arraignment, Mrs. Hargis reportedly screamed at her husband, "What did you bring her here for?" when he appeared in court with an unidentified woman. She became hysterical and struggled with court attendants who subdued her and led her from the courtroom.

During her trial, Mrs. Hargis reportedly screamed that she "wanted to die" and, since being incarcerated in the Maryland State Prison for Women at Upper Marlboro, Md., has reportedly attempted to commit suicide at least twice.

The city is presently in the process of drafting a sign ordinance.

In other business, the commission continued until Sept. 18, discussion and recommendation to the city council on amendments to the off-street parking requirements of the zoning ordinance.

Applicant for the sign was Singleton Realty, at 210 Little Falls St., whose spokesman said the firm wanted the sign erected for business reasons and felt that it did conform to the area.

THE ZONING administrator had previously asked for the commission to review the case and to give its opinion. The commission decided the sign was not compatible with the area which surrounds City Hall and is designated as one of two areas in Falls Church which requires special types of architecture and building heights.

Since joining the Fairfax planning staff, he has participated in the preparation of several comprehensive plans in addition to review of the area's zoning ordinance.

BEFORE assuming his duties with the commission, Pask will assist in the completion of the Upper Potomac Land Use Plan.

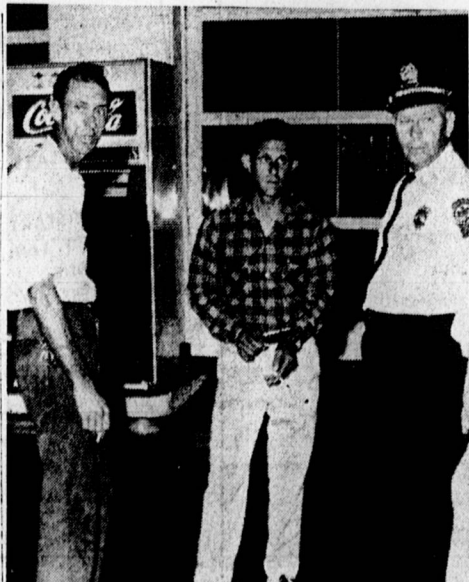

Commission Chairman Morris G. Sahr said the advisory planning agency was "pleased" at being able to attract a person of Pask's qualifications to the job.
