

Text of <https://www.washingtonpost.com/archive/local/1998/01/06/james-b-hunter-dies-at-58/df289f42-9db5-4daa-89fo-4158dfoa4f42/> as displayed in Chrome on 25 September 2026. The Post's archive shows the first two paragraphs of an article without a subscription, and refuses a direct fetch; these are the two paragraphs it showed, copied from the rendered page; nothing was edited.

JAMES B. HUNTER DIES AT 58

The Washington Post, January 6, 1998

By Richard Pearson

James B. Hunter, 58, an Arlington native and businessman and retired Marine Corps major who became a popular and respected member of the Arlington County Board, died of cancer Jan. 5 at his home in Arlington.

Mr. Hunter, a Democrat, served on the board from 1990 until retiring for health reasons on Sept. 8, 1997. He served as board chairman in 1993 and 1996 and was vice chairman in 1992.