group of 12 Arlington women serving in World War 11, took on additional significance yesterday afternoon at the dedication of the Memorial Rose Garden, one of the beauty spots of Northern Virginia. "Lest they forget lest we forget," said Mrs. Nell Brewer Broyhill, chairman of the Arlington Rosa Garden Foundation, in dedicating the Rosa Garden Shrine to those dead heroes and heroines and the many other Arlingtaniens who served in World War 11. "The long toil of the brave will not be lost In darkness," said Mrs. Broyhill in presenting the Rose Garden to the people of Arlington County; and her words were also a tribute to those members of the foundation and all those who assisted In bringing the eight-year-old project to its heart-stirring conclusion. "I accept this beautiful shrine with pleasure and with gratitude in behalf of all the people of Arlington," said County Manager A. T. Lundberg. "Lest we forget - dedicated to the valiant and courageous men and women who bore the colors of the country in World War II and as a living memorial to those who gave their lives that freedom might not perish from the earth" is the Inscription on the plaque, mounted on a stone monument in the lower level of the garden. Mrs. Walter J. Moore, president of the Arlington Chapter of Gold Star Mothers, and Raymond W. Baker, vice president of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, unveiled the plaque which was presented by the C of C. The program opened with presentations by the United States Air Force Drum and Bugle Corps, conducted by S/Sgt. Garold Eaglin.

Lee Potter served as master of ceremonies. The invocation was given by I Army Chaplain <Col.) William B. Estes; and was followed by "God. of Our Fathers," sung by a chorus composed of choir members, from over 100 Arlington churches, conducted by Sgt. Finer Nisula of the U.S. Army Band, and the history of the Memorial Rose Garden was related by A. E. West. The U. S. Air Force Glee Club, conducted by T/Sgt. Samuel Fernley, then sang "Prayer For Today" and "America the Beautiful." Neil Foss, past commander of the American Legion Billy Mitchell Post No. 85, presented in behalf of the post and its Ladies Auxiliary, a large American flag and a towering metal flagpole. Members of the other Arlington Legion posts and Auxiliaries, 139, 312, 350, 194 and 129 joined with representatives of post 85 and its Auxiliary in forming the Honor Guard as "Old Glory" was raised while the Air Force Drum and Bugle Corps played "To the Colors." The chorus and the more than 1,000 men, women and children gathered at the scenic spot adjacent to the Arlington Hospital, joined in singing "The Star-Spangled Banner," and Mrs. Nerva Greenwood, organist played "God Is Our Foundation." The unveiling of the plaque, the dedication by Mrs. Broyhill, and the acceptance by Mr. Lundberg, were followed by "The Recessional," sung by the chorus. (The closing words of the hymn "Lest we forget—lest we forget" echoed through the colorful garden where brilliant-hued roses swayed in the light breeze; then the clear tones of "Taps" by the Drum and Bugle Corps became the dedicatory benediction. And, as the last muted tones were heard, the crowd gazed at "Old Glory" fluttering in the breeze, the dedicated Memorial Garden, and then to the group of Gold Star Mothers who were representing those parents who lost sons and daughters in World War I. The garden shrine belongs to the people of Arlington because a tireless group of citizens "did not forget."

INTERNATIONAL NEWS WINS JERVIOM American Newspaper Week

Turn The Pages Little Son; You'll Live In Their Shadow

(Editor's Note: Today inaugurate "Newspaper Week," October 1-8. The following is a condensed prize-winning essay written for the American Newspaper Publishers Association in 1948 by Dean Helms, Jr., University of Indiana. It is particularly significant to Americans, young and old, as of the press is threatened around the world.)

I read my daily newspaper and toss it on the floor. My two-year old son comes toddling into the room and sits down to play with the pages. As he turns them, folds them, and listens curiously to the rustling of the paper, I find myself filled with meditation, with wonder. I find myself speculating about the future of my son—and the effect of the newspaper. Now it is only a toy to him. But in a few short years he will be reading it; he will be studying its contents in search of knowledge and truth. If you could understand, my son, what could I tell you about that mighty instrument of communication that you hold so casually in your tiny hands? Will you learn to read it and understand, analyze, interpret? To cull the facts from the propaganda and apply them effectively to your own life? There is so much I could say, my son. I could tell you, first, of the great sociological knowledge to be gleaned from your newspaper. I could tell you that only by reading of the actions of the individuals and groups who make

Publishers, Editors Lash Truman's Screening Edict; La Prensa [Prensa] Incident Cited

EVANSTON, 111. (INS) —Forty-three of the nation's top newspaper names have lashed out against President Truman's recent news-screening edict and warned that "the American people are in danger of losing their right to freedom of information."

Editors and publishers of America's leading newspapers held a forum yesterday with Dr. Alberto Gainza Paz, exiled publisher of the Peron-seized Argentine newspaper, La Prensa. The group, despite individual differences, met on common ground —that the people must be informed of what their government is doing so public offices will be their servants and not their masters/ The forum was sponsored by Northwestern University. The publishers, with Dr. Gainza Paz concurring, unanimously adopted a declaration that: " . . this fundamental right (freedom of information) of the people is being steadily undermined by the growing practice of secrecy in government on national, state and local levels . . ." The group criticized Mr. Truman's executive order which imposed new security regulations on federal agencies. The group added that, American newspapers are lax in letting the public know how vital freedom of information and press are. The declaration was drawn up by Edwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor; Richard I.J. Finnegan, consulting editor of the Chicago Sun-Times; Alexander F. Jones, executive editor of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald-Journal; Ralph E. McGill, editor of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, and Kenneth E. Olson, dean of the 'Fletcher School of Journalism. Dr. Gainza Paz emphasized 'Throughout the forum that the people's right to freedom of information hinges on a free press—that the right depends on a vigorous public opinion backed by a free press.' Dr. Gainza Paz said the seizure (of his Buenos Aires daily convinced him "it can happen anywhere.") The adopted declaration stated that "serious problems" facing people everywhere can be solved only "if inhabitants of every nation are permitted to communicate . . . by speaking, writing, and thinking their thoughts."

Slieve said Ana ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free —John 8:32 up our own particular culture, and of the reactions of others, can we assure ourselves of right from wrong, of the acceptable from the non-acceptable. Then, my son, I could tell you of the great value of the newspaper in the teaching of government. This is vitally important, and is perhaps the outstanding influence in our keeping democracy alive. And finally, my son, I would warn you that the newspaper tells all, and that the decisions are yours in separating truth from fallacy in the quotations of men. I would beg of you to all that the newspaper has to offer. I would ask you to read and be affected by accounts of the grossness and horrors of preliminary wars in other corners of this very small world, and not toss them off with a shrug, as I have. I would ask you to heed the warnings in your newspapers of approaching conflict, and to listen to the advice of the editors who would avoid coming to grips with other nations.

Turn the pages, son, and stare at the strange hieroglyphics. Never forget that the newspaper is your eternal shadow. In the span of existence, it is but an infinite particle of time behind you, recording your actions, your beliefs, and sometimes prophesying your destiny. You cannot escape it. And if you and your generation survive, you must learn to read and Study it .and somehow develop a deeper understanding rtf yourself and your fellowman than I have in my generation.

Milk Commission Jurisdiction To Be Questioned

J. Maynard Magruder, Arlington delegate to the state legislature, has announced that the Arlington delegation will question the Virginia Milk Commission's jurisdiction in price fixing in the Alexandria-Arlington area at a commission hearing October 9. Speaking for himself, Senator Charles R. Fenwick and Delegate George Damm, Mr. Magruder reiterated the protest that has been made by the Arlington County Board that the commission can not fix the price of milk sold in this area, but produced outside of the state.

Last week, Judge Harold F. Snead, of the Richmond Circuit Court, ordered the commission to hear further evidence on this question, at the request of the County Board. The October 9 hearing will be in the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria, at 10 a.m.

ARLINGTON, VIRGINIA, MONDAY, OCTOBER 1,

Hilder Says GOP Using Unfair Tactics

"Republican candidates (or the State Legislature have employed unfair tactics in their current campaign", Leonard O. Hilder. Chairman of the Arlington Democratic Executive Committee, said today. "One Republican stated, at a recent luncheon, that our Democratic members of the Legislature had failed to object to some offensive remarks leveled at citizens of Arlington and some nearby counties, at a recent re-districting hearing in Richmond. The truth is that State Senator Charles R. Fenwick, present at the hearing, did make immediate objection. Furthermore, if these same Republican aspirants had attended this important public hearing, as they were perfectly entitled to do, their own objections could have been recorded. It appears that they prefer to stay in Arlington and make false attacks upon their opponents while they are away looking after the interests of their county.

"It was stated further, by one of the Republicans, that some of the 17 bills directly beneficial to Arlington County, passed in the last session of the Legislature, were originated in idea form by various local civic and governmental groups. Of course this is true . . . and it should be true. It has been the policy of our Democratic legislators to confer with individuals and citizen groups for suggestions. They have no pride in authorship. Their function is to represent the people in obtaining necessary legislation, irrespective of origin. They take credit only for preparing and successfully steering bills through the Legislature . . . often a very difficult task, and one at which our Democratic team has been unusually successful," Mr. Hilder stated.

Pastor Challenges School Critics To Reveal Identity

The Falls Church Citizens' Committee for Better Government was asked yesterday to "come out and state positively its purposes" in its opposition to the Falls Church school board.

The challenge was issued by the Rev. Ross Allen Weston in a sermon at the Arlington Unitarian Church. He asked the committee specifically for four statements of Its Intentions, including an admission or denial that it is affiliated with Allen Zoll's National Council for American Education.

Leadership of parents' anti-progressive school drives in various parts of the country has been charged to Zoll. The Falls Church better government group has been linked to his movement by a fullpage advertisement in published August 31 In the Fairfax Standard. The advertisement asserted the "present school board embraces the ienets oi extreme progreaslvism in education." It included a reprint of an editorial from the Saturday Evening Post which was construed to reflect opinions of Zoll.

Mr. Weston asked the Falls rrch committee to "state whethIt Is really concerned with better government or wants tq, maintain the status quo at the expense *of the children and to the benefit of the taxpayer." He challenged the group to "state in black and white exactly what the proper alms of education should be." and to "outline a system of education better than the one we now possess^ Weather Forecast

Advisory Group Opposes Roads System Change

RICHMOND, Va. (UP) The Virginia Advisory Legislative Council Baya thera should be no changes in the state's secondary highway system. In a report sent to Governor John Battle the council says counties should not be permitted to withdraw from the system. The council had been asked by the 1960 General Assembly to study the advisabilty of enacting laws permitting counties to withdraw from the secondary system. The secondary road system was established in 1932 and since that time all county roads have been under the control of the state highway dapartment with the exception of roads in three counties. These counties took advantage of an option which permitted them to enter the secondary system or tp maintain their own county roads. The option is no longer available. The council says a survey shows that almost all. rural counties are opposed to changes in the secondary system. Of the urban counties, only one definitely favored legislation permitting withdrawal. The council says while the theory of local government should be strengthened" there are some "things which by their very nature must be handled on a statewide basis. Among these is the state's highway system." The council based its report on a study made by a committee headed by Delegate W. H. Irvine of Campbell County.

Group Charges Curriculum Violations

A group of Stratford Junior High School parents has filed a petition with the Arlington School Board charging that it Is violating Vir. glnia curriculum laws In requiring five major subjects for ninth graders instead of four. James R. Miles, defeated candidate for the School Board nomination and one of the petition signers, said yesterday that under the law the School Board must make Its General, Education course, which combines English with Social Studies, an elective Instead of a required course.

The petition states that this is the course that adds the extra major subject to the Arlington requirements.

Addressed to School Superintendent William A. Early, the petition charges the board has violated the following curriculum regulation In the Virginia code: "PUPIL LOAD Four unit courses each semester. In addition to health and physical education, shall be considered a normal amount of work carried for credit toward graduation by the pverage pupil. The school may permit those exceptional pupils who rank in the upper 25 per cent to carry for credit as many as five units or the equivalent. Seniors, wjio need a fifth unit to meet graduation requirements. may he permitted to attempt an extra subject provided other demands upon the pupil's time are not too heavy." "It Is therefore requested." the petition reads, "that you adjust the curriculum for the ninth grade at Stratford Junior High by reducing the pupil load to four unit courses, without denying to each pupil the minimum of the required course In English and by giving each such combination of required and elective courses so as to provide the nunll at the completion of his high school career with the eight required subiects and the eight elective to which he Is entitled."

Childs Tells League 4 County Elective Offices Should Be Under Manager,

County Board

JL proposal to place the offices of treasurer, commissioner of revertne, sheriff and county olork under the jurisdiction of the county, manager and the County Board was among a number of proposals recommended to 175 people attending the third annual Institute oh Local Govrnment Saturday at Stratford Junior High School.

The proposal was made by Dr. Richard S. Childs, chairman of the executive committee of the National Municipal League, who termed the offices "those little islands of power. He said It was sheer myth that the people hold those officers responsible for their duties and that "they are technical jobs and should be done by people responsible to the manager. Dr. Childs, a veteran advocate of the manager form of government, also recommended that a nonpartisan ballot be used for County Board elections and urged clarification of the relationship between the County Board and the manager.

The Institute's program, under auspices of the Arlington League of Women Voters, was held in a morning session and a luncheon session.

Bertram Gross, chairman of the Arlington Citizens Advisory Planning Commission, urged a favorable vote for the bond issue to finance the next two years of the county's Six-year Plan. He said the major part of the plan is to be accomplished during the next two years and involved an expenditure of $1,500,000 annually for the next six years.

Attorney Frank Morgan, member of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Planning, advocated for city incorporation before the county becomes surrounded by a number of small cities, He disagreed with opponents of incorporation in the amount of State and Federal highway funds that would be lost by such city annexation.

State Senator Charles Fenwick and County Manager A. T. Lundberg disputed Mr. Morgan's statement and said that his figures did not show new highway construction which is paid for by the State.

Dr. George Spicer, professor of political science at the University of Virginia, said that the authority of the County Board and the manager under State law are without meaning, perplexing and contradictory. He also said that he believed Arlington should remain a county for a while longer.

Attorney Edmund D. Campbell, former chairman of the county board, proposed discontinuance of the annual elections from the county board in order to end continuous political turmoil. He charged that the present, hoarded more authority than the manager statute intends and is for the sake of good government. more than it can sustain. the Arlington Civic Federation, said that the County Board should be given the power to issue subpoenas in conducting investigations. He said that cross country bus service should be considered in any proposed change in the county's government. Attorney William Winston, member of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Organization and Procedure, said that, under the civil service act, civil employees are divided into competitive and non-competitive categories. The competitive class, he said, are under the direction of the county manager and the non-competitive under individual constitutional members of the government.

"Unless the elected officers are given free reign to get loyal and efficient employees they can't be held responsible for the good work of their offices." he said. He said he opposed making it a crime for county employees to express their political opinions.

Mrs. Harold Stone, former national vice-president of Women Voters, summarized proposals for changes in the county government which, she said, should be presented to the General Assembly meeting next year. She said these proposals are: appointment of the manager to an indefinite tenure instead of the annual appointment: the power to appoint department heads should be given to the manager rather than the County Board, and the creation of the office of county attorney as a legal counsel separate from the office of Commonwealth's Attorney. Mrs. George Vletheer, president of the Arlington League of Women Voters, presided at the morning session and Mrs. Gordon Lilt, chairman of the League's Local Affairs Committee, at the luncheon meeting. Mrs. Carl Marcy, second vice-president of the Virginia League, was the moderator.

FIVE CENTS
 UN Body To Seek Solution
 Bradley, Ridgway Tour Front, View Far East Scene
 By International News Service Britain is evacuating its technicians from Abadan, site of the world's largest refinery. The British Cabinet ordered the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company to evacuate some 300 technicians Wednesday morning—a day before expiration of Iran's expulsion deadline. The cabinet took the action after officials of the billion dollar oil company, which Iran is nationalising, warned that the position of its employees was becoming impossible. The British will leave aboard a British warship. After the cabinet acted, another company official called the evacuation an economic Dunkirk. At Flushing Meadow, N. Y., the United Nations Security Council will meet this afternoon to seek some kind of solution to the oil dispute between the British and Iranians. The United States is looking for an agreement that would be acceptable to both sides on the spot. In the dispute, there appeared to be some doubt whether Britain could win approval for its realignment. £1 million sent to the Committee on Saturday.

Matthew B. Ridgway toured Army front lines in Korea today. The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the United Nations Supreme Commander talked with field officers and got a first-hand fill-in on the fighting.
