

DISTRICT ABOLITION FEARS ARE QUIETED

Arlington Election Results Show Even Representation on New Board.

ARLINGTON COUNTY COURT HOUSE, Va., November 5.—The fear of many persons that abolition of the magisterial districts might result in the selection of too many members of the new County Board from one section of the county, to the detriment of others, was put at rest by the result of Tuesday's election. It was pointed out today that the five members elected are believed to be as nearly perfectly geographically located as possible. Two of the members are from Clarendon, which, because of its dense population, is thought to deserve more representation than other portions. They are Mrs. Elizabeth Barron Magruder and Lyman M. Kelly.

The northern area will be represented by Fred A. Gosnell, who lives at Livingstone Heights, the western portion by Harry A. Fellows of East Falls Church and the southern portion by John C. Gall of Aurora Hills. The eastern portion is practically unpopulated since it is composed largely of Government reservations.

Votes Well Distributed.

Another point with respect to the County Board that was brought out today is that no member was elected by an unusually large vote of any particular precinct, but rather by general choice of the entire county. Most of them did, of course, receive heavier votes in their home precincts, but there was none who would not have been elected even if they had received a smaller vote in their own precincts.

Those elected stood head and shoulders above most of the other 46 candidates when the votes were counted, and this fact leads to the belief that they will receive the whole-hearted support of the entire county in the administration of their affairs.

While the members of the new board have not yet gotten together, it is generally believed that the selection of a new county manager will not be delayed until after the board takes over its duties on next January 1. Such a selection could be decided upon by the members as individuals and verified after they take the oath of office, it is said, and such action would overcome what might prove to be a long delay in getting the county's affairs under way.

There are also other matters that can hardly await the induction of the new board into office. Of principal importance among these is the consideration of legislation that will be necessary by the forthcoming session of the General Assembly, which convenes in January, a short time after the new government takes charge.

Joint Meetings Planned.

Several meetings with the present board of county supervisors will probably be sought in order that the new board may be fully advised as to present policies and the present state of finances and equipment. The old board also has some recommendations that it will wish to make to the new. It is highly probable that one of the first matters to be placed before the new board will be the question of enlarging the present police force. Sheriff Howard B. Fields, who was re-elected by a large majority, has stated many times during the past campaign that he would seek to enlarge the force if retained.

It will be necessary for the old board, before it goes out of office, or for the new board as soon as it goes in, to provide an additional court room for use of the new county court. At the present time police court is held in the board room at the courthouse.

That an effort will be made to have this matter settled before the first of the year is thought likely. B. M. Hedrick, who was elected judge of the new county court, is also a member of the present board of county supervisors.

Lawrence W. Douglas, who will succeed William C. Gloth as commonwealth's attorney, will spend much of his time during the next two months in preparation for his new office, which is considered by many to be the most responsible one in the county.

All other officers were re-elected and are so familiar with their duties that no special preparation for continuance of their duties will be necessary.

LEAK IS CHARGED IN FAIRFAX BALLOTS

Sample Guides Are Found to Be Identical With Official Voting Lists.

Special Dispatch to The Star.

FAIRFAX, Va., November 5.—Charges that there was a "leak" somewhere in the preparation or distribution of the official ballots used in the election in Fairfax County were made yesterday by Commonwealth's Attorney Wilson M. Farr to the county electoral board and board of supervisors. Farr stated that he does not now know where this leak occurred, but that if he can find out he will prosecute.

These charges were concurred in by members of the electoral board after examination of sample guide ballots distributed to the voters prior to the election.

According to Farr, not only was the order of names on the two ballots identical, but the same type was used, the same defects appearing in the official ballots appeared also in the guide ballots, the spacing between the names was the same, and the width and length of paper used.

Farr stated that in his opinion there is one other possible source of the leak, namely, the ballots distributed on request to absentee voters. A voter may have applied for a ballot and opened it prior to election day. It could not then be voted, as the law requires that the seal be broken in the presence of a notary, but its contents might in this way become public. A check will be made of ballots issued to absent voters to ascertain whether any were not returned.

Farr requested the electoral board to prepare a primer of instructions for judges and clerks of election and for registrars. He pointed out various ways in which the State election law is not now complied with.

The Annual Autumn Sale Has Made a Record For Two Things—"Quality" and "Economy"

THIS heralded dawn of a new era in merchandising is a fact; not a theory.

The standard of quality has been raised.

The standard of price has been lowered.

This store is a brand-new store in merchandising—and in the relation to price "Furniture of Merit" has taken on a new meaning—expressed in new designs, new ideas and new ideals.

That's what is in the Annual Autumn Sale—better than you've bought before.

Former prices are noticeably absent. We have not quoted one, for the very good reason that being new merchandise it has never had a former price. But the sale prices are truly less than the new low regular prices. So that your saving is practically doubled—and it is safely true that you have never before bought so good for so little.

Whether you want a suite for the living room—dining room or bed room—or an occasional piece to fit into the home somewhere; or there is a housekeeping need to be supplied—rugs, bedding, etc.—you will be deeply interested in the offerings in this Annual Autumn Sale.

The selection is still excellent—for we made unusual preparations for what we designed to be, and succeeded in making, a most unusual occasion—and the actual savings you will enjoy are without either precedent or parallel.

Our Costless Credit makes it possible to buy all you want and pay for it as is convenient
