

Dalton and Mann Debate Record in Legislature

By MARY LOU WERNER

Ted Dalton, Republican candidate for Governor of Virginia, and Delegate Harrison Mann of Arlington, Democratic candidate for re-election, clashed over their legislative records last night.

Mr. Mann, speaking for the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., touched off the exchange at a candidates' meeting sponsored by the Arlington Civic Federation by calling Mr. Dalton a "do nothing legislator."

Mr. Dalton, who is a State Senator from Radford, retaliated by charging: "I can tell you what Mr. Mann has been doing—he helped take away Arlington's right to elect its school board."

The Dalton-Mann debate was about the only new note of the long meeting, at which all other Arlington candidates—including those for the county board and the county's three House seats—repeated familiar charges and countercharges.

At the last session of the General Assembly, said Mr. Mann, Arlington State Senator Charles R. Fenwick sponsored 33 bills of which 19 passed. Mr. Dalton sponsored six, none of which passed.

The G. O. P. candidate said Mr. Mann's comments "are a far cry from what Mr. Almond himself said in Roanoke when we met on the same platform last week. He said I had made valuable contributions in the Senate, and he would like to see me stay there."

One major bill which Mr. Dalton claimed he originated—"but as quick as I introduced it the Democratic machine sponsored a substitute measure"—permitted families of mental patients to pay $40 a month for care if they could afford to.

Mr. Dalton said one of his unsuccessful bills at the last session called for repeal of the poll tax, and the other was for a locally administered pupil assignment plan to cope with the Supreme Court desegregation decision.

"And how we need that pupil

Woman Held In Slapping At Hearing

An Arlington woman was charged with assault and battery last night after she allegedly slapped a man after a county board hearing on operations of the reassessment board.

Mrs. Maxine Lampshire of 2159 Quebec street, was charged by L. B. Price, 4514 North Twenty-sixth street. Mr. Price said Mrs. Lampshire slapped him in the face.

The incident occurred as the crowd was leaving the courtroom where the hearing was held.

Mrs. Lampshire at first refused to give Mr. Price her name but her husband furnished it after Mr. Price got a policeman. The policeman, Capt. Robert Weekly, was standing at another side of the room when the incident occurred.

Mrs. Lampshire is the wife of Navy Comdr. Harvey R. Lampshire, president of the Cherrydale Citizens Association.

Mrs. Lampshire is a supporter of the Arlingtonians for a Better County. Mr. Kaul, an ABC man, called for the investigation of the reassessment board, which was headed by J. Maynard Magruder, a candidate for the county board un-

Asked by a reporter if he was a Magruder supporter, Mr. Price replied he was an "independent." Magruder supporters were among those with him, however, when he swore out the warrant against Mrs. Lampshire.

4-H Group Lists Plan To Use Junior College

The national 4-H Club Foundation yesterday detailed its proposals to use the old Chevy Chase Junior College as a 4-H leader training center as opposition to the proposals crumbled.

During a six-hour public hearing before the Montgomery County Board of Appeals, Attorney R. Robert Linowes sent a dozen witnesses to the stand to testify on the proposal.

The only opposition came from Kahl K. Spriggs, 7005 Meadow lane, and Howard Phillips, 6915 Woodside place.

The opposition folded as Mr. Linowes filed an agreement made between the foundation and the Citizens Committee of Chevy Chase Section Four on the maximum use of the facilities.

The agreement calls for a maximum overnight occupancy of 300 for a four-week period and a maximum of 250 the rest of the year. Under terms of the agreement the average throughout the year would be 100.

The foundation is seeking a special exception to the zoning ordinance to use the facilities as a private nonprofit educational center.

Improvement program to get the facilities at 7100 Connecticut as soon as the Johns Hopkins University operations is scheduled to vacate the research office moves out of building by December 31.

Seven Facing Hearing In Racial Seating Case

Seven persons, including five colored and two white, face hearings in Arlington County Court next month on charges of violating Virginia's segregated seating law at a candidates' meeting at Claude Swanson Junior High School last night.

At least three indicated they intended to make a new test of the law, which failed to get a definitive ruling in another legal test of last year.

Under the Virginia law, segregated seating is required at all public meetings. The Arlington School Board has the law posted at each school and organizations that use these schools are advised that the law must be enforced.

John B. Lohman, a member of the Organizing Committee of the Arlington Civic Federation which sponsored the meeting, said all seven persons were asked by ushers to move to areas designated for members of their race, but they declined. He said police then asked the persons to move again and when they refused placed them under arrest.

They were taken to police headquarters, booked and released on their personal recognizance.

Three persons were arrested before candidates began speaking, but the others were taken out while the meeting was in progress. The arrests were orderly and the persons arrested offered no resistance. There was hardly a stir in the audience of 400 and the candidates kept right on talking.

Arrested first were three clergymen, the Rev. John Lomax Winters, 42, of Route 1, Alexandria; the Rev. Columbus Christopher Wilson, 65, of the 300 block Shreve street, Falls Church, and the Rev. Thomas Archie Robinson, 67, of the 3800 block Alfred avenue, Alexandria. All are colored.

They said they believed Virginia's segregated seating law is contrary to the Constitution, and that they intended to plead not guilty.

Arrested next were two white women, Mrs. Abbie Atwater Hadley, 46, of the 5200 block South Tenth place, and Mrs. Grace Edgbert Oehser, 56, of the 3100 block North Eighth street, Arlington.

They entered the meeting with a Negro woman, walked down front with her and sat in the section set aside by the school board for Negroes at public meetings.

Mrs. Hadley and Mrs. Oehser said they did not belong to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"We like to sit with our friends, and see no reason why we shouldn't," Mrs. Hadley said.

The other two persons arrested were Gailester Crawley, 44, of the 2400 block South Monroe street who said he was a barber, and Mrs. Marjorie Young Taylor, 40, of the 2000 block North Emerson street, who gave her occupation as a food handler. Both are colored.

The earlier Arlington test of the seating law originated with the arrest of Miss Faith Bissell, a librarian, who took a seat in the Negro section at a candidates' meeting just before last year's county board election. She was fined $15, but the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals threw out the fine because the warrant failed to state she was a white woman. As a result, this did not settle the constitutionality of the law.

room for improvement in the school system? If so, specify as to what improvements you feel are needed.

Mr. Brown: "Any school system can be improved. Ours is excellent already, but I would like to see still further improvement in the quality of instruction, further development of enrichment programs for brighter students, a still broader curriculum featuring, for example, more languages. Big need is for higher salaries for teachers to get and keep top-notch teaching personnel."

If elected to the County Board, you will have a voice in selecting School Board members. What qualifications and viewpoints would you look for in making these appointments?

Mr. Brown: "Qualifications for appointment to School Board: Demonstrated understanding of the goals of public education and the meaning of education in a democratic society; a general tolerance, moderation and objectivity of viewpoint. I want the sort of person who has demonstrated through his or her activities in the community that he has the confidence and respect of most of the people. First-hand knowledge of school problems, perhaps best obtained by having had children in the schools. Some knowledge of local finance and budget procedures also would be desirable."

You have stated that you would work for the return of an elected School Board. Do you see any real hope for achieving this goal in the near future?

Mr. Brown: "I think that perhaps within the next couple of years we might be able to get back the right to elect our own school board. If ABC has a majority on the County Board, we can demonstrate to the Legislature that such is the wish of the majority of our citizens."

Your opponent has criticized three members of the School Board for serving on your campaign committee. What is your comment?

Mr. Brown: "I am proud to have the three elected members of the School Board serving on my campaign. School Board members are policy makers. School Board policies are at stake here because the County Board will now control policy through the appointment power."

"The participation of School Board members in an advisory capacity in a political campaign is perfectly legitimate. Mr. Peck is an open supporter of Mr. Magruder's, and there's no secret that Mrs. Lane also supports him. Magruder admits he has consulted with both of them. The only reason they are not openly on Magruder's campaign committee is that they probably are considered political liabilities."

Adventist University Is Voted $760,000

The Seventh-day Adventist Church general conference yesterday voted $760,000 for the first building of its new Potomac University and then announced work on the structure would start immediately.

The new university, seventh in the Washington area, will be built at Takoma Park, Md. The first building will be at Carroll avenue and Old Bladensburg road and will have 21 classrooms and 35 faculty offices. A library and a chapel seating 500 persons will adjoin the structure.

According to officials, Potomac University will consist of the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary and the Seventh-day Adventist School of Graduate Studies.

At present the seminary has 190 students, 14 faculty members and 17 guest instructors. Dr. Charles E. Weniger is dean.

The School of Graduate Studies will have Dr. Winton Beaven as its dean, 11 faculty members and an opening class of about 30.

Falls Church Approves $1 Million Apartment

A 91-unit apartment development near West Broad and Southwest streets in Falls Church was approved last night by the City Council.

Approval of the $1 million project on a 10-acre tract culminated a five-year controversy between area residents and developer Irving Berman.

The Council favored the mission of 112 protesting signatures of nearby home owners. The only "no" was registered by Councilman Raymond Taylor. Councilman William Hansbarger abstained.

"We've turned Mr. Berman down many times," said the Mayor, Thomas J. O'Halloran. But, he added, it is "good planning" to erect the apartments as a buffer between residences and commercially zoned land to the west.
