

They're Asking For Your Vote on November 4th

Jacob C. Bechtel

"No vision or foresight has been evinced by Arlington officials in planning the county," Jacob Bechtel, who is running for the County Board holds. The 70-year-old candidate is a resident of Glencarlyn and has lived here since 1922.

He was born in Germany and was four months old when his parents brought him to this country and settled in Lansing, Iowa. He first came to Virginia in 1918 and lived in Alexandria until 1922 when he moved to Arlington. A retired carpenter, he homesteaded for 13 years in North Dakota and went to school in a log cabin in Iowa.

Mr. Bechtel is a believer in organized labor and is a member of the Carpenters' Labor Union.

He claims that campaign promises are like New Year's resolutions and mean little. He favors economy in local government and feels that the present County Board has been "guilty of reckless spending."

Though Mr. Bechtel said he has not had the advantages of a great deal of formal education, he believes his common sense fits him for a position on the Board. He is opposed to the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting and favors construction of sidewalks and better schools.

Mrs. Florence Cannon

Endorsed by Better Government League

Recipient of the Arlington Civic Federation's gold medal award for meritorious civic achievement in 1944, Mrs. Florence Cannon is the only woman candidate for the County Board. She is the widow of Andrew Hamilton Cannon and her home is at 4008 South 8th Street.

Born in Danville, Pa., Mrs. Cannon was educated in the Danville High School and was employed with the Public Works Administration from 1933 to 1941 and has been with the War Department since that time. She represented the Federation, of which she is a past president, and Organized Women Voters before committees of the Congress on legislation relating to Arlington County's water system, the George Washington Memorial Parkway and Memorial Bridge, and assisted in preliminary work on the County Manager Act.

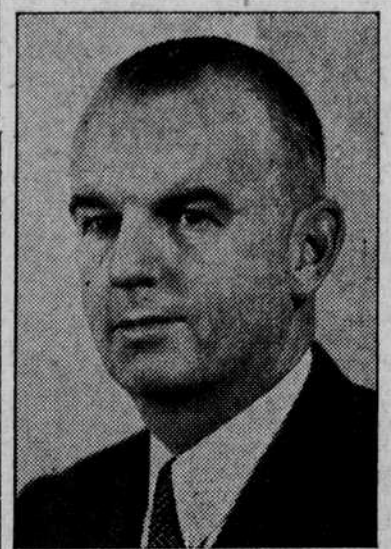

Mrs. Cannon is a member of the Better Government League, whose endorsement she carries; the Organized Women Voters, Arlington Hospital Auxiliary, is chairman of the revenues and expenditures committee and the county government and radio committees of the Civic Federation, is a member of the Arlington Memorial Association, the Children's Home Society of Virginia, and a delegate to the Inter-Federation Conference. She was a delegate from Arlington for 12 successive years to the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

The candidate favors a long range plan for county improvements with a series of proposed projects for accomplishment each year. Another plank in her platform calls for an information pamphlet, prepared under direct County Board supervision, with complete historical, geographical, political and official data regarding Arlington.

Mrs. Cannon favors a "firm and realistic civics educational program beginning in junior high school with the assistance of individual county officials; codification of the county ordinances for ready reference and study; the establishment of a Department of Recreation to promote and assist in financing public recreation and to co-ordinate civic recreation interests and activities; immediate acquisition of not less than seven to 10 acres of suitable land in accordance with the cooperative proposal of the Arlington War Memorial Association, and prompt financial assistance in the construction thereon of a public swimming pool and tennis courts; establishment of a Department of Assessment, and immediate study of a plan for county-wide construction of sidewalks financed from general funds.

Mrs. Cannon favors a bond issue sufficient to finance prompt construction of the most urgently-needed county improvements; publication of proposed budgets in a "form understandable to private citizens"; better-organized County Board procedures; accelerated expansion of the County Library system, and progressive improvement in the Fire Department.

F. Freeland Chew

Incumbent
Endorsed by Greater Arlington Association

F. Freeland Chew has served on the County Board for 12 years and is seeking re-election to a fourth term. Until this year, when the two major parties agreed to a non-partisan Board election, Mr. Chew was elected on the Democratic ticket.

His platform, he said, will be "a continuance of my best efforts to render honorable and efficient public service, always mindful of the fact that I am a representative of all the citizens of Arlington, and to continue to administer the affairs of the county on an orderly, progressive and sound financial basis, totally independent of any group or individual."

The candidate, 49, was born in Washington and came to Arlington in 1906. He was educated in the Washington schools, studied engineering, and engaged in public land surveying in Wyoming for six years as chief of a field party. He volunteered for service in the Army Engineer Corps in World War I and served two years in France and Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. Chew live at 1502 North Edison Street and have two sons, both graduates of Washington-Lee High School and veterans of World War II. In 1920 Mr. Chew was appointed to the staff of the U. S. Senate, which position he now holds. He has been active in civic enterprises here and is a charter member of the Civic Federation.

Following adoption of the county manager form of government, Mr. Chew was nominated as an independent for the County Board by the original Better Government League in convention, and advocated a non-partisan administration of county affairs. He was defeated in the general election by 165 votes in a field of 51 candidates. First elected to the Board in 1935, he led the ticket for re-election in both 1939 and 1943, and has served three times as Board chairman.

Mr. Chew was author of the resolution, reorganizing the county departments under the county manager. He sponsored the movement to separate the police department from the sheriff's office, placing it under the county manager, and the movement to secure adoption of the existing budgetary control and cost accounting system for the county. He also pushed reorganization of the old office of purchasing agent.

Mr. Chew was author of the resolution providing for George Washington Memorial Parkway Unit 2 and the ordinance prohibiting the construction of row houses in Arlington. He led the fight against commercial zoning on Lee Boulevard. During World War II he was chairman of the civilian defense committee here, organized the Air Raid Warden Service and was its chief, and also was control officer for communications.

Harry W. Cuppett

Incumbent
Endorsed by Greater Arlington Association

Board Incumbent Harry W. Cuppett has only a brief public record to present to the people since he was appointed to the Board May 19 by Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy to succeed Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, who resigned because of ill health. Mr. Cuppett has always been aligned with the Democratic Party.

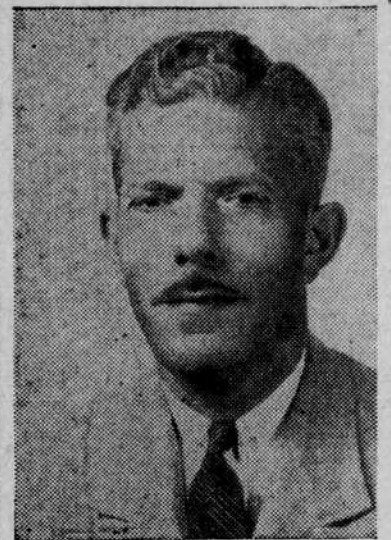

He is 56 years old and his home is at 1011 North Stafford Street. His daughter, Mrs. Hazel Long, is deputy sheriff in the office of Homer G. Bauserman.

Born in Washington, Mr. Cuppett came to Arlington in 1899, was educated in public schools here and Washington and for 20 years has conducted a hardware store on the corner of Fairfax Drive and North Stafford Street. He is one of the three original members of the board of directors of the Old Dominion Bank and one of the seven who made possible its reorganization in 1933.

Mr. Cuppett has served for two years on the board of directors of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, is a member of Columbia Masonic Lodge and holds a 32nd Degree in the Scottish Rite. He is also a member of the Ballston Fire Department, the Ballston Citizens' Association and the Greater Arlington Association.

The nominee favors "good, sound government" and is "opposed to any unnecessary expenditure of funds. I favor a pay-as-you-go system of financing," Mr. Cuppett said, "but I am back of the bond issue for an incinerator because of its necessity, and the many other capital outlays that face the county at this time."

Millard P. Divine

A volunteer fireman here for more than 25 years, Millard P. Divine, 42, is running for public office for the first time. He helped in the organization of the Arlington County Volunteer Firemen's Relief Association and is a past president. He has lived in Arlington for 39 years, and with his wife and three sons his home is at 4015 North Washington Boulevard.

Born in Hyattsville, Md., he attended Arlington grade schools and also studied in New York, Illinois and Washington. He has been employed by the Federal Government for over 25 years and is now head of the Land Section, Bureau of Power, Federal Power Commission.

Mr. Divine assisted in training civilians in the District of Columbia under the National O.C.D. during the war. He is interested in safety work and has fostered the teaching of fire prevention and fire training here. He is also a member of the Arlington Rod and Gun Club.

The nominee's declaration of principles follows:

To revitalize to completion those obligations of the county with respect to public improvements heretofore undertaken and to date only partially completed, and which are now most vitally needed;

To exert every effort to create in the minds of county employees an appreciative attitude toward private property instead of the wilful indifference now displayed;

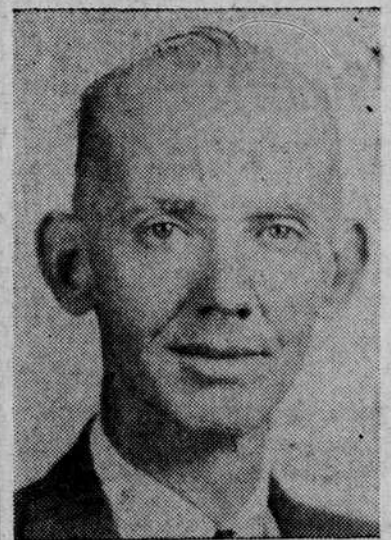

To advocate the creation by compact of a public utilities commission for the whole of the Metropolitan Area;

To foster, under new existing State statutes, the placing of all county paid personnel under either a merit system or civil service, with salaries commensurate to those paid others with equal qualifications for like services in the Metropolitan Area;

To advocate a more adequate and effective police and fire department with additional compensation and allowances for like services, as is done in other areas within the Metropolitan Area;

Will not sanction or participate in the exhibition of conflicting personalities nor political animosities "such as have heretofore been revealed at County Board meetings"; and

To receive and consider all matters coming before the County Board with an open mind, giving preference to those undertakings found to be in the best public interest and from which the greatest public benefits can be derived.

Robert W. Gaines

A real estate broker and developer since 1921, Robert W. Gaines, who has lived in Arlington since 1931, is running for the County Board. His home is at 601 North Monroe Street and his offices are on Court House Square. He is married and the father of one daughter and two sons.

Born May 26, 1893, in Slidell, La., he was graduated from the Slidell High School and later attended Tulane University at New Orleans. He first came to Virginia in 1917 and established residence in Norfolk. He is a member of the Methodist Church and Arlington Post, American Legion, and served in World War I with the 80th, 81st and 82nd Divisions with the rank of lieutenant after training at Camp Gordon, Ga.

"My purpose in soliciting support for election to the County Board," Mr. Gaines said, "is because I believe I can best serve my community in that capacity and I assure all supporters of just and representative government. I pledge myself to honest and economical administration of county government and to support appropriate pension plans for the Police Department, Fire Department and all non-elective county employees."

"I pledge a thorough investigation of the tax situation so that all properties, business and otherwise, can be assessed according to their proper market value. I pledge a program of reasonable county zoning commensurate with the actual future needs of this thriving community. I pledge a program of development of county streets and sidewalks to take care of the present needs of all residents and particularly of children on their way to and from school. I also pledge myself to support all reasonable veteran programs."

Mr. Gaines said this week he favors a County Board clerk available at the Court House to dispose of minor complaints so that business before the County Board will proceed more efficiently. He also favors an orderly development of the county as a whole without favoritism to any particular clique or group.

The candidate will support a bond issue for a new incinerator but does not believe bond issues should be voted unless there is sufficient revenue to meet obligations of that nature without placing an undue tax burden on the people.

Lincoln Mackey

A native of Arlington, Lincoln Mackey, 45, son of Crandal Mackey, who served as Commonwealth's attorney here from 1904 to 1916, is seeking election to the County Board. "My conception of the duties of a member of the Board," Mr. Mackey said, "is to honestly, forthrightly and considerately represent all the citizens of this county. I am making this campaign upon the honest conviction that I am equipped to serve my fellow citizens."

Educated in public and private schools in Washington, Mr. Mackey took engineering at The George Washington University and law at National University. He served as a second class seaman in the Navy during World War I and in the Army Corps of Engineers in World War II, and was discharged as a lieutenant-colonel.

He was with the Virginia Highway Commission for six years and was engineer for Arlington County from August 1, 1930, to August 1, 1932. He is now engaged in private practice as a surveyor with offices on Court House Square. He designed Arlington Forest, Westover Hills, Westmont, Highlands, Woodlawn Village and many other sections in the county.

The nominee is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Society of American Military Engineers, Sigma Nu Phi Legal International Fraternity, Elks Lodge, Washington Board of Trade, Unknown Soldier Post, American Legion, and the Arlington Exchange Club.

"While it is necessary to spend money for improvements which we need, it is also necessary to get dollar for dollar value," Mr. Mackey said in stressing his wish to see economy in government. "I am committed to the principle that public money should be expended with great care, and that those who authorize its expenditure should exercise the same degree of care required of a trustee in the execution of a trust."

He said he favors increasing the pay of police and firemen to make them comparable to salaries paid such public employees in other sections of the Metropolitan Area.

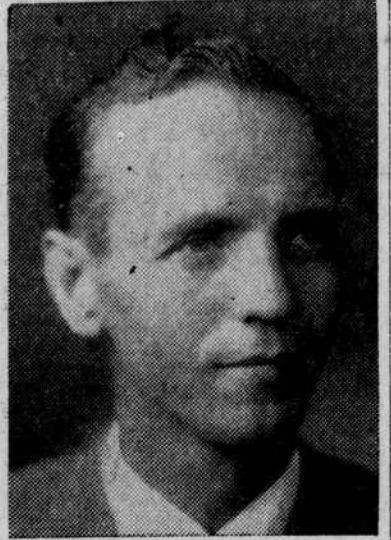

COURSE IN SCRIPT WRITING

Stanley Field of 317 North Quincy Street, recent winner in the second annual Y. M. C. A. International Script contest and chief script writer for the radio and television section of the War Department, has been engaged by the Washington Workshop to give a course in professional radio script writing. Mr. Field's class will meet Fridays at 7 p. m., at the Workshop, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W.

CIRCLE MEETINGS

Circle 1 of the Clarendon Presbyterian Church will meet at 1 p. m. Tuesday, October 28, at the home of Mrs. Neil Johnson, 3016 North Quincy Street. Mrs. A. I. Richmond and Mrs. W. E. Smith will be co-hostesses.

Circle 2 will meet Tuesday at 1 p. m. at the home of Mrs. O. L. Brandenburger, 834 South Barton Street, with Mrs. C. E. Ware and Mrs. Lewis Quigg as co-hostesses.

T. Oscar Smith

Endorsed by Better Government League

A resident of Arlington for nine years, T. Oscar Smith has the backing of the Arlington Better Government League for election to the County Board. He was born in Georgia and attended schools there, both public and private, through the fifth grade, and worked his way through the higher grammar grades, high school and college. He took his A.B. degree from Lincoln Memorial University and studied law at The George Washington University.

Employed in the Department of Justice in 1935 as a clerk, he was promoted to assistant chief of a division and after service in the Navy returned to the Department of Justice as a personnel officer. He represented the Department for 18 months on the Federal Council of Personnel Administration and the Legislative Committee, and is now employed as an attorney for the Department.

Mr. Smith was in the Navy for 30 months, 20 of which he served as a communications and staff officer aboard a small carrier in the Pacific. He saw action at Saipan, Guam, Tinian, the Philippine Islands and Okinawa.

He has been active in civic organizations since coming here and fought a successful 15-month campaign to reroute buses off South Orme Street. He recently resigned as president of the Patrick Henry Parent-Teacher Association, and is president of the Columbia Pike Citizens' Association and a delegate to the Civic Federation. He is judge advocate of John Lyon Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, a member of Delta Theta Phi legal fraternity, the Better Government League, which has endorsed him, the Citizens' Committee for School Improvement, Virginia Bar Association and is a past president of the Department of Justice Recreation Association.

His 10-point platform follows: Establishment of complete civil service system for county employees; more equitable regulation of and surveillance over public utilities in the public interest; early revision of Master Zoning Plan and strict adherence to sound zoning practices; establishment of a five-man zoning board or commission to handle all zoning matters within the scope of the Master Zoning Plan; moderate outlays for construction of urgently needed capital improvements and opposition to a strict pay-as-you-go plan;

Codification and publication of county ordinances and dissemination of information about local government; cooperation between the County Board and School Board in planning and establishing a well-rounded program of recreation for children; courteous, fair and equal treatment of all citizens at all times with no favoritism to any groups or individuals; establishment of a non-partisan primary or run-off election for all local elective offices, and establishment of a local housing authority if needed to acquire and operate Federally-owned housing projects and to administer State rent control laws.

Lawson Wimberly

If elected to the County Board in November, Lawson Wimberly announces he will not seek more than two terms. A resident of the south end of the county since coming here seven years ago, he is a strong advocate of representation on the county's governing body from that section. He is 42 and lives with his wife and two children at 2814 South Arlington Ridge Road.

Born in Milam County, Tex., Mr. Wimberly attended public schools. He is an electrical worker with 10 years' experience in electrical engineering and is assistant to the president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in Washington at the national headquarters of that organization. He is also trustee of the Electrical Workers' Benefit Association. He served as chief deputy of the State Bureau of Labor Statistics in Austin, Tex., from 1935-37.

Since coming to Arlington the Fourth of a Series: Candidates for the County Board

candidate has taken an active interest in civic and political affairs. He is a member of the South Oakcrest Civic Association, the Hume Parent-Teacher Association and has been identified with the Democratic Executive Committee, being a former committeeman from Virginia Highlands Precinct Mr. Wimberly stresses that in this campaign he is not a nominee of any party or association, but is strictly a non-partisan candidate.

Mr. Wimberly favors the manager form of government with long range planning for future development of the county. He is opposed to bond issues as a general practice of financing but approves bond issues for certain specific improvements, such as an incinerator.

The nominee believes public employees should receive compensation equal to salaries paid for similar work in private industry. The zoning program of the county, he holds, should be planned, and should not be delayed from. He feels there should be adequate provision for commercial areas.

Fairlington Poll Backs New School

Residents Reported Strongly Against Proposed Addition

Fairlington residents overwhelmingly favor the building of a new elementary school in the north section of the big housing development instead of an addition to the present school in the south section, a poll report filed with William Montgomery Smith, Arlington School Board chairman, disclosed this week.

The report showed that 2,011 Fairlington families want a new school for the north section as against 92 families in favor of an addition to the present school, which serves both sections. In the north section, 1,035 families polled expressed preference for the new school and 9 said they preferred the addition. In the south section, 976 families voted for the new school against 83 for the addition.

According to the poll of the families who said they favored a new school, only 34 decided they would not want it if it could not be built as soon as the addition.

The poll and a census of Fairlington children were taken during the last two weeks by the Fairlington Association under the direction of Mrs. Robert C. Young. The opinion poll was taken after the Fairlington Association questioned school board plans for the $175,000 eight-room addition to the present school. Bids on the construction of the addition already had been asked for and received by the board when the association raised its objections at a board meeting September 30.

The civic organization spokesmen protested that the hundreds of children in North Fairlington need an elementary school of their own and should not be subjected to continued inconveniences and traffic hazards by being required to attend the school in the south section. The delegation asserted that the present school already is overcrowded. The board's attention was called to the fact that in the referendum last May, voters approved a bond issue which provided funds for a new school in North Fairlington.

The School Board agreed to postpone action on the Fairlington addition until a poll of residents could be taken to learn if the majority wanted a new school or the proposed addition, even though more time might be required to build the new school.

Lions To Sponsor Hallowe'en Party

The South Arlington Lions Club will sponsor its first annual Hallowe'en party at the Westmont Shopping Center, Columbia Pike and South Glebe Road, Friday night, October 31, from 7 p. m. to midnight.

There will be noise makers, balloons, confetti and novelties for old and young, and movies for the children beginning at 7 and ending at 8:30. Prizes will be given for the best costumes for both males and females and there will be dancing to music by Roy Mays and his orchestra from 9 p. m. until midnight.

Admission is free and everyone is welcome as this is a part of the extensive campaign of the South Arlington Lions Club to provide juvenile recreation.
